

In 1991 Estonia sang its way to independence with nights of protest songs as the Soviet bloc collapsed.

Today the President - who moonlights as a DJ - is behind a number of initiatives to get the country singing again and to export that sound.

Toomas Hendrik Ilves wants the world to embrace his country's music.

Original article on BBC Radio 4 webpage .