

Tonight, President Toomas Hendrik Ilves will fly to Warsaw to be present at a meeting of Central European government leaders, which will also be attended by U.S. President Barack Obama.

The meeting will focus on the state of democracy in Europe and the radical changes in the Middle East and North Africa.

The Estonian Head of State and Evelin Ilves will be visiting Warsaw at the invitation of the Polish President, Bronislaw Komorowski, and his wife, Anna Komorowska. The presidents' wives will visit the birthplace of Fryderyk Chopin and several important cultural and historical museums.
