

BLRT Group and its approximately 4,000 employees contribute to the sustainability and development of a large and busy company that connects the shores of the Baltic Sea with faraway shores, told the President, Toomas Hendrik Ilves, at the 100th birthday of BLRT, which was established as the Russian-Baltic Shipyard.

"For us, one of the largest shipbuilding companies and metal processors of this area is linked to the best understanding of a modern and successful industrial group. You have been prudent and developed by finding new markets and production spheres, and you have also maintained your good name and the quality of your work over the past hundred years, which are crucial," stated the Head of State.

"BLRT as a developing and modern company and one that implements new technologies in its sector is one of the strongest trademarks in Estonia. Both today and in the future," President Ilves said.
