

Evelin Ilves

Many know that there is an island in the Indian Ocean where open-hearted people can feel the energy of a goddess. But have you heard of an island that is home to fairies? Fairies are fond of deserted beaches with white sand and crystal clear water, where they can dance and flutter about on the waves and sand dunes. They are surrounded by the age-old Great Silence – rare and precious. There are no sounds other than the hum of the sea, the chirp of birds, the echo of the footsteps of the roe deer, and your own heartbeat.

Their home lies in the Baltic Sea, far from the mainland, and is still unspoiled, genuine, and handmade. This is a place with a unique touch, slightly old-fashioned, and so authentic that it seems unreal. If you dare and wish, you can feel a touch of the fairies there.

Hiiumaa – my well kept Estonian secret!

Original article on the Hiiumaa Kataloog webpage (PDF-file).